

Press Release

Nav Raman has resigned from Channel 4 after 5 years as Commissioning Editor, Factual Entertainment.

Whilst at the channel Nav was responsible for overseeing a wide range of peaktime factual entertainment series ranging from the popular Bratcamp and Supernanny to hits such as The Unteachables, Bollywood Star and Ian Wrights Unfit Kids. She also commissioned the successful and acclaimed landmark series Child Genius, which follows the progress of 10 child prodigies into adulthood.

Julian Bellamy Head of Channel 4 said "Nav has made a big contribution to Channel 4 through her ability to bring subjects to life with entertaining formats and great casting. She has great editorial judgement and a real talent for creating popular television with a purpose."

Nav Raman said " I have had a fantastic 5 years at Channel 4 where I have had the opportunity to commission programmes that are both entertaining and thought provoking and now feel the time is right for a new challenge."
